Raise vs Rise?

Raise and rise have very similar meanings; both refer to the action of moving up. But they're used in different ways.

Raise is used when someone moves something to a higher position. That means it is a transitive verb (it takes an object).

Rise is used to refer to the general action of moving upward—without a direct object. It is an intransitive verb.

Example

Susan raised her hand in class. Then she rose from her desk and walked toward the front of the classroom.

Note that the past tense of raise is raised, and the past tense of rise is rose.
